Good leaders understand various communication styles and approaches, listening skills, emotional intelligence concepts, and non-verbal communication.

The first part of this session will provide an overview of how great leaders can utilize these skills in their day-to-day activities to help advocate and influence decisions, projects, workforce, management, council, networking, and overall change and improvement.

The second part of this session will provide a panel discussion with water industry leaders. The panel is comprised of leaders in our industry with an operations background, who will share insights and examples of their own career progression and success stories.

There will also be time at the end of the session to ask our esteemed panel any questions or suggestions for your own career progression and leadership goals going forward.
